

Curt Woody

Director - Economic Development and Tourism

Six weeks after graduating from the University of Kansas in 1980, Curt's car was packed and on his way to Tucson. Since then his professional career has been spent entirely in the building and development industries.

In 1985 Curt started a business that supplied the consumer and building markets with commercial architectural specialty products. For the next 17 years he built a successful company by focusing on building strong business and personal relationships.

After selling his company in 2002 he joined Sundt Construction as their Business Development Manager. For the next seven years he continued building on his network of relationships while focusing on numerous market sectors that included higher education, healthcare, municipal complexes, airports, and research facilities.

From 2009 to 2012 Curt was a consultant in the architectural, engineering, and construction industries teaching business development best practices and strategic planning. Curt joined the Marana team in March of 2012 and is their current Director of Economic Development and Tourism.
