

Ilan Wurman is an associate professor at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law at Arizona State University, where he teaches administrative law and constitutional law, and practices law with the firm Tully Bailey LLP. He recently led a successful lawsuit against the City of Phoenix that resulted in the City cleaning up "the Zone," the 1,000-person public homeless encampment in downtown. He has also represented clients against state agencies, counties, and the Arizona Corporation Commission, where he has fought to prevent government overreach. On the academic front, Professor Wurman writes on administrative law, separation of powers, and constitutionalism, and his academic writing has appeared or is forthcoming in the Yale Law Journal, the Stanford Law Review, the University of Chicago Law Review, the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, the Virginia Law Review, the Duke Law Journal, the Minnesota Law Review, and the Texas Law Review among other journals. He is also the author of A Debt Against the Living: An Introduction to Originalism (Cambridge 2017), The Second Founding: An Introduction to the Fourteenth Amendment (Cambridge 2020), and Administrative Law Theory and Fundamentals: An Integrated Approach (Foundation Press 2021).
